

Angela Todorova, Project Manager

Brief Bio:

Angela has been with Klop Architecture since 2011 and has worked in architecture for more than 6 years. Angela has a deep-rooted passion for architecture. Originally from Macedonia, she grew up interning at her father's structural engineering and general contracting company, where she fell in love with seeing creative concepts and designs transform into tangible physical spaces. Motivated by her love of design, Angela focused her academic study on architecture by enrolling in the Architectural and Engineering Program at her university in Macedonia. In 2006, she seized the opportunity to transfer to the United States and complete her studies in San Francisco.

Soon after receiving her 5-year professional degree at CCA, Angela joined Klop as a Project Assistant. Working very closely with Geoff and John, Angela learned the Klop Architecture style and process from the ground up. Now a Project Manager, she has led dozens of modern and mid-century modern residential projects for our clients.

A permanent resident of the United States, Angela is native to Macedonia and has studied architecture there, in Italy, Greece, and in the United States. She received her Bachelor's degree from the California College of the Arts in 2010.

Angela lives in Burlingame, and misses the days of biking to work when she used to live in San Francisco. She enjoys tennis and horseback riding as well as architectural travel.
